

World's First "Pressure Washing" System for Dogs Launches Kickstarter Campaign

Two-in-One De-shedding & Shampooing Tool Leaves Dogs Clean and Dry in Only 10 Minutes

It could be the best pet invention since the flea collar. A Houston-based startup has launched a Kickstarter campaign to bring to market the world's first two-in-one de-shedding and shampooing tool for pets. This brilliant self-contained device called "PetScrub" combines a gentle brush to remove and vacuum up loose hair, while simultaneously shampooing and conditioning the pet with an atomized water solution which leaves the animal almost completely dry afterwards. No more hassle of washtubs, brushes, buckets, shampoo bottles and dank towels – and especially no more struggling to get Fido into the water – instead the pet sits comfortably, just the same as regular brushing.

With PetScrub, the entire process of washing a dog takes less than 10 minutes. The unit includes built-in storage space for shampoo bottles, extra brushes or treats. It is compact and lightweight for easy storage and portability. It is also tightly soundproofed to minimize any motor noise. And while most dogs have no problem with the sound right from the start, PetScrub has a unique built-in training mode for easy adaptation. PetScrub comes with multiple brush adapters for any size dog. With the money saved by extending the length of time between professional groomings, PetScrub pays for itself within months. The pressure clean solution is especially effective for penetrating thick fur of dogs like Huskies, Saint Bernards and Chow Chows.

Early Bird pledges begin at $150 for one PetScrub unit on Kickstarter

"As any dog owner knows, keeping them clean can be a constant struggle," said Kamel Takla, founder of PetScrub. "They live with us, around our kids and in our beds, yet they're only bathed once or twice a month or less. And depending on the breed, they can get stinky pretty fast, and of course there's the constant loose hair to deal with. PetScrub makes it easy to clean them quickly and more frequently."
